This popular regional favorite is famous for its 229 years of continuous publication by the actual heirs of its founder, John Gruber and its impressive track record predicting the coming year's weather over a year in advance! It has served generations in the Mid-Atlantic Region as the primary source for regional weather predictions and astronomical data. Its highly-accurate weather forecasts were first calculated using centuries-old methods and now, using sophisticated meteorological techniques and highly customized computer software, its annual predictions are even more accurate than ever! Still, The Almanack has maintained its original charm and appeal, providing useful hints and tips for farming and everyday living, articles of interest, and timeless wisdom. It's been called "uniquely Hagerstown", but is well known throughout the world. Millions of copies have been sold and it has been said that The Almanack has made Hagerstown widely-known throughout the U.S. and that it has given Maryland an 'epicenter' of farming and agricultural life.

Throughout its long history, The Almanack has been recognized countless times for its contributions to colonial agrarian society, to our history, and our national pride. And The Almanack has had quite a long history! First published in 1797, it is the second oldest almanac in the United States and THE OLDEST almanac still published by heirs of its founder, John Gruber. It is the 47th oldest company in the United States today and is one of the most talked about almanacs around the nation. News organizations such as The New York Times, USA Today, U.S. News and World Report, and NBC-TV have described the Hagerstown Almanack's forecasts to be more accurate than most other weather almanacs and at times, even more accurate than the National Weather Service!

Today, The Almanack continues as a viable resource, providing astronomical, agriculture, and dairy management content, developed and delivered by subject-matter experts, along with weekly weather updates and observations of local weather enthusiasts while pursuing new means of reaching our followers through email campaigns, frequent posts across its multiple social media platforms, and over its growing YouTube channel.
